Get to know Linda - and see why she should be our next State Rep!

Linda Robertson is an environmental/industrial microbiologist who works to find innovative solutions for complex problems. An astute problem solver, she led research in water and wastewater projects for Weyerhaeuser and Nalco, was awarded 12 patents, starting her own international consulting business in 2007.

As the mother of two adult daughters and grandmother of two delightful grandsons, Linda understands the challenges of having a family and balancing work and life.

Strongly supporting a person's right to make decisions for their own body, Linda believes reproductive health care decisions should be made between a woman and a doctor, not politicians. Linda sees climate change as a crisis issue, threatening the quality of life on this planet and our children's future. She has worked on energy conservation issues and methods to eliminate air and water pollution.

Linda is a staunch supporter of common-sense gun laws. The unprecedented number of mass shootings in the U.S. is not only tragic, it's avoidable and all gun violence must be examined as a public health issue.

Linda and her husband, Len Robertson, moved to St Charles in 1988 to raise their daughters. Len is a retired teacher and current fiction writer. Linda enjoys kayaking on the Fox River, which is a wonderful resource and treasure of the Fox River Valley. An avid gardener, she enjoys sharing perennials with other gardeners.
